“We are delighted to welcome these powerful leaders to our board,” said Laurie Dalton White, Executive Director of the California Conference for Women. “Their expertise in diversity and inclusion—and powerful track record as leaders—will be a great asset to us as we continue to advance equity for women in the workplace in California.”

The California Conference for Women is part of the nationwide Conferences for Women network, dedicated to advancing women in the workplace. The network attracts more than 50,000 people to its annual conferences in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Texas, and California.

The next California Conference for Women will be held virtually on Mar. 2, 2022. Last year's inaugural conference featured Stacey Abrams, Ursula Burns, Dr. Jane Goodall, and more than a dozen other high-profile speakers. Topics included the need for more women in leadership positions, what employees with children need from their employers, and how to create change. It attracted 7,300 participants.

Sponsors of the California Conference for Women include Google; Hologic; Juniper Networks; Target; Cisco; Bristol Myers Squibb; Dell Technologies; Johnson & Johnson; UKG; Bayer; Merck & Co., Inc; State Street Corporation; Amazon; Oracle; Takeda Pharmaceuticals, Teradyne; Fairygodboss; Ladies Get Paid and PowerToFly.

The California Conference for Women also hosts the podcast Women Amplified and publishes interviews and advice for women through its newsletter, The Conference in Your Inbox. Learn more at www.caconferenceforwomen.org.
