CALIFORNIA, October 19, 2021—The California Conference for Women announced today that registration for its March 2, 2022 Conference is now open.

The annual conference, which attracted more than 7,300 participants in March 2021, is focused on advancing women at work. This year’s virtual event will address re-imagining the workplace in a post-pandemic world, achieving equity and inclusion, resilience in challenging times, and more.

Mary J. Blige--award-winning singer, songwriter, actress, producer, and philanthropist—is the first keynote speaker to be announced.

For the first time, the Conference will also host a free virtual career fair on March 1. The event—which will feature many virtual, flex, and hybrid positions—is designed to help women who lost their jobs due to COVID get back to work.
